Would Spend 20 Million Dollars To Aid 9 Million Drouth Acres

Plan Involving Diversion of North Saskatchewan River To Be Submitted to Prime Minister During Western Visit

(From the Hanna Herald)

The following story, from the Edmonton Journal, reporting an interview with G. A. Forster M. L. A. for Hand Hills, refers to the North Saskatchewan River diversion (Wm. Pearce Stock Watering Project) advocated by The Hanna Herald on various occasions.

Proposing to spend $20,000,000 in solving the drouth problem for 9,000,000 acres of Alberta and Saskatchewan farm and ranch lands by a huge river diversion, a comprehensive scheme is winning wide backing and likely will be submitted to Premier Bennett during his visit here. Proponents of the plan point to the fact that the scheme would also greatly relieve the unemployed problem.

G. A. Forster, M. L. A. for Hand Hills, is one of the prime movers in the effort and is authority for the statement that it is meeting with favor throughout the country that he represents, there having already been considerable local discussion with general approval.

A diversion of the North Saskatchewan, west of Red Deer, and a crossing of the Red Deer river at Coutant are the main features of the scheme. Sullivan lake would be filled as the first of a chain of reservoirs, and the watering system thus created would then feed the Hanna area and the Acadia valley, and thence into southern Saskatchewan.

Revival of Old Scheme

Mr. Forster points out that the scheme is a revival of one mooted some 20 years ago and known as the William Pearce stock watering scheme. A survey of the region was made at that time by Mr. Pearce for the Dominion government, which spent $100,000 on the work and published a report. The cost was then estimated at $50 per acre for the land served, and because the debenture indebtedness that would thus have been incurred was considered too great the project was never undertaken.

Under present conditions, claims Mr. Forster, the cost would be much less and is estimated at a total of about $20,000,000. This would be a large amount, the Hand Hills member admits, but in view of the benefit it would provide it would be good business he holds strongly.

For if the scheme were put in operation it would serve a total area of some 9,000,000 acres of land in Alberta and southern Saskatchewan, making that large tract of country safe for the farmers of the future.

Construction Easy

Only the first few miles south west of Red Deer present any engineering difficulties, says Mr. Forster, and for the rest of the system construction would be easy. From an engineering standpoint the project has been declared quite practicable, and from the standpoint of results it would provide ample moisture for the country in a network of tributaries, sloughs, and subsidiary reservoirs.

By way of demonstrating the resources of the Hand Hills country, Mr. Forster has brought to the city a quantity of potatoes grown on the Berry creek, where one farmer has a three-acre potato-patch and a good crop. They form a fine sample, and are declared to be fairly indicative of what the region can do in the way of mixed farming.

It is hoped to bring the entire question to the attention of the prime minister while he is in the province.

CHINOOK SKATING CLUB IS ORGANIZED

At a well attended meeting, held at Cooley Bros. garage, on Monday evening of this week, the Chinook Skating Club was reorganized. It is hoped to revive this great winter sport in Chinook.

Officers elected, and committees for the coming winter are as follows:

President, H. W. Butts, Sec. Treas., H. Johnston.

Ice committee; Murray, Rideout, and Lee.

Grounds committee; Robinson, Duck, and Cooley.

The skating rink is being lengthened this year to make skating and hockey a greater pleasure. Work has already commenced on this and the grounds committee will endeavor to have everything completed before the ground becomes frozen.

During a discussion of money matters it was decided to appoint a committee to arrange for holding a card party and dance in the near future, the proceeds to be utilized in defraying any necessary expenses as light and coal bills etc. It is also hoped that with generous support and aid of young and old citizens alike with the work of hauling water, flooding, caretaking, etc., that it will be possible to offer free skating all this winter.

The committee appointed to have charge of the card party and dance consists of Messrs. Youell, Elford, and Robinson. It is understood that they have arranged for Nov. 10 as the date, so mark this date on your calendar of fun.

Thiefs Gets $40

Worth of Goods

Breaking into H. W. Butts' barber shop and poolroom, early Tuesday morning of this week, thieves made away with about $40 worth of merchandise.

Entrance to the building was gained by prying open the cellar door, and apparently leaving by the same way. Among Mr. Butts' loss were many cans of tobacco, cigarettes, candy bars, gum, etc. The thieves also secured about $3 in loose change from the cash register.

An investigation by the police is being held.

Ease Pain, Headache in Few Minutes

Now comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuralgia, ... the fastest safe relief, it is said, yet discovered.

These results are due to a scientific discovery by which an Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. An Aspirin Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it and thus it goes to work almost instantly.

When you buy, though, be on guard against substitutes. To be sure you get ASPIRIN'S quick relief, be sure the name Bayer in the form of a cross is on every tablet of Aspirin.

MADE IN CANADA

Does Not Harm the Heart

A Time For Thought

Winter approaches and the year progresses steadily to its close. The major activities of this great western agricultural land are rapidly being completed for another season. The hours of daylight are becoming fewer, the days shorter, and the evenings and hours of darkness longer. As Nature thus works out its annual changes, man, too, alters the routine of his life. As his activities on the land become lighter, he rises later in the morning and retires to rest later in the evening. And he employs those evening hours in ways not possible to him when physically tired out from a long day's labor in the fields.

In the late Fall and Winter months thousands of people in Western Canada devote themselves to reading, to study, to forms of recreation, to community gatherings, which are not possible during the strenuous months of plowing, seeding, harvesting and threshing. The Fall and Winter becomes the time for self-improvement, for checking up of oneself, for planning for the future.

Possibly, because of the very nature of the times through which the world is now passing, with a multitude of, as yet, unsolved problems; because of difficulties to be overcome which are taxing the resourcefulness and testing the courage of everybody; because of the danger of feelings of despair overcoming hopefulness and faith,—because of such a world condition it is probable that people will do even more thinking and study than in times past.

Unquestionably people are thinking, perhaps as they never thought before. Admittedly, there is much loose thinking, reckless thinking, by some. There are others who, perhaps, imagine they are doing some real thinking but who, in reality, are allowing others to think for them and are merely adopting the thinking of others. But many others, probably the vast majority of people, are thinking for themselves, thinking seriously, and earnestly studying, and will continue to do so in even more earnest, serious fashion during the next few months.

Few investments, says one writer, are so sure and profitable as the effort to equip oneself in the four fundamental accomplishments:

1. How to think accurately and comprehensively.
2. How to express thought in talking and writing.
3. How to work skillfully with the hands.
4. How to take one's place among men.

The next four or five months will provide a golden opportunity for many of us to make such investments. As we read a newspaper, magazine or book, and obtain entertainment therefrom, the opportunity is likewise ours to think for ourselves, to advance our own thoughts, to express our ideas advanced by the writer for the time being engaging our attention. It is an opportunity to test the accuracy and comprehensiveness of our own thinking.

Or, as we listen to some speaker over the radio, to an eminent clergyman, a man well known in public life, an outstanding figure in the financial or industrial world, a great scientist, inventor, traveller, author, or social worker, and as we glean information, and hear definite opinions advanced, we, of course, advance our knowledge and are entertained. But we will have missed a real opportunity for self-advancement if, at the same time, we fail to ponder over and analyze what we hear, and bring our own thinking apparatus into full play, and apply the test of our own serious, concentrated thought, to the views expressed and the ideas advanced.

It is well to be a good listener, a consistent reader, but it is better to be a student. Let us absorb from others; in that way information is gained and knowledge advanced. But let us be something more than a sponge which merely absorbs. Let us train ourselves to sift the truth from the false; the good from the evil; that which is strong from that which is weak; selecting that which is constructive from that which is purely destructive.

There is much to criticize these days, and destructive criticism is about the easiest thing in which any person can indulge. But there is also much to commend and applaud. With all its horrors and suffering it is to be commended,—condemned as the peoples of the world have not yet seen fit to condemn it,—but even in the days of war there was nevertheless developed attributes of character of the finest and noblest type. The present economic depression is a world tragedy. Its evils must be mitigated, and a reputation of it prevented as far as it is humanly possible to prevent something over which man alone has not complete control. But out of the depression there is slowly, but surely, arising a greater conception of man's relations, duties and responsibilities toward his fellow man.

There is a better way of life for every individual, for every community and nation, for the world. It will be a better way, a better way, a better way, in not by some tremendous upheaval, not by a rapid overthrow of what now is, and the equally rapid substitution of something else, not by the efforts of any one man, or party, or nation, but by the individual efforts of all combining to one great common end. The man or woman who does his or her own thinking, deep, serious thinking, who applies their own God-given powers and energies to the particular task which confronts them, will be the real creators of, and leaders in, the new era that is dawning.

Now is the time for every person to fit himself or herself for the great work now at hand and ahead.

London's New Lighting Scheme

Famous Buildings Will Be Flood-Lighted On Certain Occasions

Canadian visitors to London this winter will find town a much less gloomy place than they have been led to expect, states Douglas Webster, London Correspondent of the Regina Leader-Post. A lighting scheme has been planned and will be carried out this winter which will lead London of its reputation of a city of dark and gloomy places.

Famous buildings such as the clock tower of the Houses of Parliament, the National Gallery, Westminster Abbey, and St. Paul's Cathedral will be wired for floodlighting and illuminated at certain times.

The London society has the plans in hand. Its intention is to flood-light certain buildings frequently and especially on such days as have national significance. The cost will be borne privately.

The project was first mooted by the Incorporated Association of Architects and Surveyors some three years ago. Nothing came of it then. Today the London Society has the matter well in hand and it is hoped that the first display of floodlighting under the society's auspices will coincide with the British Industries Fair which takes place early in 1934.

Although this floodlighting is designed to boost the Industries Fair scheme will not stop there. The Royal Society intends to make it a permanent feature of the London season.

DEPRESSED BY ACUTE ACIDITY

There can surely be no doubt about the effectiveness of a remedy for acidity that can give such permanent relief as this woman's case.

I suffered for many years from acidity in various forms," she writes. "At last it became so acute that every morning I awoke with a gnawing pain and a great depression of spirits. I tried Kruschen Salts, and the effect was magical. The pain subsided and the depression lifted like a cloud. I have taken the daily dose of Kruschen ever since. That was about five years ago and the Kruschen does not lose its effect." (Miss E.M.H.)

Kruschen is so effective with acidity because it neutralizes acid, takes the torment out of it, and gently expels it from the system. And by stimulating your organs of elimination to perfect regular action, Kruschen will prevent the harmful acid from ever accumulating again. After that you'll experience no more misery after meals.

More Work Under N.R.A.

Expect One Million Or More Have Been Re-Employed

Possibility that the count now being plotted in the United States by the N.R.A. may show re-employment of 1,600,000 or more persons in excess of present estimates is being held out by statisticians to Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator.

They have calculated that the actual count of noses by direct solicitation will reach tens of thousands of employers who do not report regularly through ordinary channels and may show that between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 persons have found work since the low mark of last winter. The present accepted figures, based largely upon reports to the labor department by industry and upon trade union estimates, run to approximately 2,500,000.

Foresee Maritime Towns Moored In Atlantic

Fore-runner Of Many Others Likely To Rise In North Sea

A vast uncharted island, fore-runner of many others which will give to the world a new race of island dwellers, is said by a Berlin correspondent likely to rise shortly in the North Sea. A time in the near future has been visualized when there will be maritime towns moored in the middle of the Atlantic and complete with luxury hotels and landing grounds for aircraft. Fast airplane services will be begun from the mainland and in between the island communities, aerodromes, with powerful wireless stations, will be built. Then will come the health seekers. Week-enders will discover this new world on their doorsteps. The islands will have their trees, flowers and gardens. The sea will be harnessed to provide electricity, and the wants of the communities will be supplied by cargo carrying aircraft from the mainland.

Japan's Activities In Pacific

Writer Claims Japan Intends To Put U.S. Out Of The Picture

"Japan is now definitely and methodically preparing to put the United States out of the west Pacific picture by force, as she did Russia in 1904," said Upton Close, author and lecturer, who passed through Victoria after a trip to Japan and Hawaii.

"When President Roosevelt authorized resumption of building of the United States navy, the Japanese gave up hope of bluffing and persuading the people of the U.S. to withdraw from the Pacific," he said. "Japan now means business."

The author said he was banned from Manchukuo because of his criticism of Japanese activities in that state.

"The Japanese people have been propagandized to the point where they will now not permit any ruling clique to abandon the campaign for domination of China and the Pacific," he asserted. It was high time the people of North America ceased to be deceived by Japanese Government officials who declared war with the U.S. was "unthinkable."

Aurora Not Connected With Weather Changes

Opinion Of Leader Of Finnish Polar Year Party

The aurora borealis, so far as known, has no connection with weather changes, Dr. J. M. Stagg, leader of the Finnish polar year party, told interviewers at Winnipeg. Many people have held the belief a display of aurora meant a change in weather. If it appeared during warm weather, they held, lower temperatures would be recorded within a 24-hour period, and its appearance during cold weather would mean the coming of warmer days.

Dr. Stagg's study in the far north, at Fort Rae, North West Territories, failed to confirm this belief. He did find, however, the aurora disrupts and telegraph lines, and had a direct effect on short wave radio communications.

Pictures Made Of Cloth

Work Of Finnish Artist Resembles New Type Of Oil Painting

Pictures made of pieces of cloth chosen for their colors and stuck to a flat surface are on exhibit in Montreal, the work of a Finnish artist. His name is Kaarlo. There are landscapes, flower pictures and even a few figure studies, in which scraps of woven stuffs have been used to produce the effect of flesh painting. Silk, muslin and all kinds of textiles are used and a great deal of patience and skill must have been required in working them into pictures to gain some striking effects which are quite surprisingly like many of the new types of oil painting.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt, young and beautiful commercial artist, and Peter Anson, a struggling sculptor, meet in an art class and fall in love. She is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family, but is not to share in their fortune when she comes of age. They are faced with the problem of "marriage or career" and Camilla does not want to let Peter down when he has so much promise as a sculptor. At an art school dance, Gus Matson, Peter's roommate, who is jealous of Peter's success, takes Camilla out on the lawn to tell her "something she should know about Peter."

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XIII.

"Well," began Gus, exhaling the smoke of his cigarette, noisily, and turning toward Camilla. "You sure do get to know a guy when you live with him. And I'm telling you now that Peter is not good enough for a sweet little kid like you. He has a dozen skirts after him all the time, like the moths around that light over there. Why? Because he kids 'em along and makes each one think she's the berries for him. D'you know how he's payin' his way through school? On the money he gets from rich dames like you! Has he touched you for a payment yet?"

"You are despicable," Camilla told him in a deadly calm voice. "I don't believe a word you are saying and I refuse to listen any longer!"

"Oh, yeah?" Gus laughed was ugly. "I'll bet you are beautiful to look at when you're mad like that. I told you I'm crazy about you and I meant it. If Peter is a good enough for you, so am I—," and before Camilla was aware of what was happening, his arms were holding her like a vise and his mouth was seeking hers while she struggled violently to free herself.

From behind them, a doubled hand struck out swiftly against the side of Gus's head and sent him sprawling up on the ground. At the same time, another arm grasped Camilla's shoulders and prevented her falling from the force of the blow that separated them.

"Did he hurt you, dear?" Peter was breathing hard, with anger and exertion.

"No, but I hope you have hurt him." She was trembling, too, with anger. "Not because of me but for what he was saying about you."

"I heard enough," Peter said curtly, "which doesn't matter." But I'm sorry I am responsible for introducing you to such a bum."

He walked around the bench and stood above Gus, who rolled over then and put his hand tentatively to his bruised jaw. Peter assured himself that his victim was only stunned, stood up and adjusted his own tie and clothes, and took Camilla's arm.

"Shall we go back to the party and forget this unfortunate affair? Glad I came out here to look for you. I missed you and had already lost one dance with you, so I suspected something was wrong." He was trying to dismiss the incident and sound casual, but his voice still shook unaccountably. "I know you wouldn't voluntarily cut the dances you had promised me."

"But, Peter, he said those terrible things about you!" She was still trembling with her own resentment.

and wondered how Peter could dismiss the thing so calmly.
"But you don't believe them, darling?" he asked quietly.
"Of course not!"
"Then, that's all that matters. You know, the world has so many people in it that there just have to be some like that—ungrateful and jealous and malicious. But time is too precious to waste even thinking about them. From now on, we'll just forget Gus. People like that just hang themselves with their own rope. He can shift for himself, as he did before I took pity on him. At least, that's one load off my mind!"

"Do you mean," Camilla was incredulous, "that you have been keeping Gus—?"
"Most of the time, he shrugged indifferently.

"And he could say that!" she exclaimed with dismay. "Well, this world surprises me a little more every day—the people, I mean."

"Sure, the world is fine. It's the people—regular horse-podger. Interesting, though," he added thoughtfully. "Every good or bad surprise I have over human nature makes me feel a little bit wiser and more able to cope with it in general. As Tennyson said, 'I am a part of all that I have met.'"

"Oh, Peter, you're so fine yourself," she told him with loving admiration, "that you can find some good in everything."

He pressed her hand that was tucked into his arm, as they walked slowly back to the auditorium. "That's because you think so, honey," he told her with characteristic modesty.

The last balloon had escaped ceilingward, many of them were deflated and had dropped to the floor which was strewn with confetti, serpentine dangled limp in mid-air, and the orchestra had crooned goodnight.

Peter Was Breathing Hard From Anger And Exertion.

Again, they were waking through the park, arm in arm. It was that witching hour when the young moon rides high and gloriously, when the air is sweetly caressing and the sounds of the night whisper and echo mysteriously like conspirators of romance. The moonlight stretched a silver path across the lagoon, down which they rippled rode gleefully with the breeze. Somewhere, a pair of birds had just finished the building of their nest and twittered sleepily, and an adventurous frog gave a frightened croak and leaped into the water with a thudding splash.

Camilla chuckled softly. "Poor thing! Perhaps he was on his way to see his girl friend and we frightened him so he never will have the courage to try again."

"Too late, anyway," she started out venturing. "Peter laughed. 'He should be taking her home, as I am—and wish I didn't have to,' he added softly, drawing her closer with the arm that held her."

"You don't wish that more than I do, Peter?"
"Precious! But that's not the worst of it. Lord knows how many more years I'll have to be taking you home and leaving you," he said.
"Not years, darling!"
"It will be, unless things happen a lot faster than I have any right to expect."
"But why do things have to happen—before we can have each other?"
"So I'll be able to take care of you, of course. Sometimes," he sighed heavily, "I'm afraid that never will be."

"Why, you dear, foolish thing, you talk as if I were going to be a burden to you!"

"Never that!" he protested. "But, you know—"

"I know nothing about letting you take care of me, Peter, this is the day of women's freedom, you know, freedom from the bane of idleness that makes them burdens to men. You don't have to take care of me, just because you love me."

"And that is just why I do want to take care of you. That is the test of a man's love, whether or not he wants to cherish and protect a woman. It's all right for women to be free and independent—free to escape from the guardianship of men if they wish. But when a woman falls in love, she goes right back to the beginning of things again—service and submission and dependence. She can't escape it. And the man who loves her in the right way, wants to take care of her, to endow her with his worldly goods. It is part of his duty."

"Of course, but all of that is in our future, dear, and for people whose situation is different from ours. I'm talking about us, now. Why should you grieve and worry over not being able to provide for me, when you should be giving the best of yourself to your work toward success?"

"But what else can I do?" Now that I've found you, I can't forget you—not for a minute. Oh, Camilla, I need you so—"

He stopped abruptly to kiss her. "How can we go on like this—for years?" his voice yearned.

"We can't," she whispered, "and we'll not."

"What do you mean?" he demanded.

Foot Guards Won Out

Regiment Of King George Can Now Ignore Traffic Light
King George of England's proud regiment of foot guards has just won a big peace-time battle without firing a shot.

Maybe the victory will not be chalked up on the regiment's official battle-roll, but all the same the guards are very jubilant, for their conquest means that in future they will not have to obey London's intricate system of traffic signal lights when on the march to the capital.

The first skirmish occurred two years ago when traffic lights were first coming into use on a big scale here, and an impatient light in Regent St. decimated one of the regiment's proudest battalions.

Guardsmen were up in arms at this affront. Not even Napoleon was able to cut up the guards, they said in effect, and they saw no reason why a little red light should be able to do it without protest.

Then a few weeks later another battalion lost its drum major through another warlike act on the part of a traffic light. The drum major marched on proudly, twirling his ceremonial staff. Imagine his dismay when he discovered he had become a mere unit of one, that the rest of his colleagues had their advance stemmed by a mere red lens.

The last straw came when the police commissioner announced he had approved the erection of 440 traffic lights at crossroads throughout the capital.

Declaring that so many lights would mean that the guards would be confined to barracks forever, the military authorities took the matter in hand. First they were furnished with maps showing how they could avoid routes in which red lights were operating, but this involved gruelling marches.

Then they began by giving 24 hours' notice of their intention to march, which smoothed away many of the difficulties.

Now they have scored a final victory. In future a traffic officer will be stationed at every signal light when the guards are out marching, and the officer will have orders to disconnect the signals until the troops have passed.

Never again will His Majesty's guards be cut up.

"THESE HARD TIMES"

"The hard times and scarcity of money make it more important than ever to economize. One way I save on clothes is by renewing the color of faded or out-of-style dresses, coats, stockings, and underwear. For dyeing, or tinting, I always use Diamond Dyes. They are the most economical ones I have because they never fail to produce results that make you proud. Why, things look better than new when redyed with Diamond Dyes. They never spot, streak, or run. They go on smoothly and evenly, when in the hands of even a ten year old child. Another thing, Diamond Dyes never take the life out of cloth or leave it limp as some dyes do. They deserve to be called the world's finest dyes!"

An Anti-Bandit Gadget

Invention May Lead To Lower Insurance For Cars

Cheaper insurance for motor cars is likely to be one result of an anti-bandit gadget invented by ex-Chief Inspector Wensley, of Scotland Yard. The device, which is being manufactured in the midlands, consists of a steel-slat shutter bearing in bold letters the word "Parked." It is pulled down like a blind behind the windshield and automatically becomes locked.

A car thief would have to use strong tools to remove it. Prominent insurance brokers and companies have decided that motorists using the shutter will be able to secure a reduction of 15 per cent. off the premiums for all private cars and commercial vehicles.

Boy Scouts On Long Trip

In an old and poorly equipped yacht, two Polish Boy Scouts have sailed from Casablanca, Morocco, and are headed southwards along the west coast of Africa. They have sailed across the Baltic, the North Sea, the channel and the Atlantic in their vessel, known as the Zjawa. In Casablanca they met Alain Gerbault, the famous lone yachtman, whose adventures they are trying to emulate.

Little Helps For This Week

"As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men."—Galatians 6:10.

I ask Thee for a thoughtful love, Through constant watching wise, To meet the glad with joyful smiles, And to wipe the weeping eyes, And a heart at leisure with itself, To soothe and sympathize.
—A. L. Waring.

Surely none are so full of cares or so poor in gifts that to them also, waiting patiently and trustfully on God for His daily commands, He will not give direct ministry for him, increasing according to their strength and desire. There is so much to be set right in the world, there are so many to be led and helped and comforted, that we must continually come in contact with such in our daily life. Let us only take care that by the glance being turned inward or strained onward we do not miss our turn of service, and pass by those to whom we might have been sent on an errand straight from God.—E. Charles.

Look up and not down, look forward and not back, look out and not in, and lend a hand.—Edward E. Hale.

One Of Queerest Trades

Professional Writer Of Speeches Has Office In London's Famous Strand

Entitled to a high place on the membership list of the club of queer trades is surely the professional writer of speeches who occupies a sky-lighted office in London's famous Strand. His enterprise and originality have at all events brought him success, for since his idea was first put into practice, a few years ago, he has written hundreds of speeches on the most diverse subjects. Titled and professional folks of all sorts apply to him. For the most part, however, his clients' requirements are of a more ordinary nature, and consist of demands for after-dinner speeches, and addresses for bazaars, presentations and similar functions. Then the writing of political speeches at times also forms a considerable part of the nimble speech-writer's activities; and on many occasions he has been called upon to write both "for" and "against" the same party and subject.

New Kind Of Sky-Writing

Partially Frozen Smoke Makes Messages Legible For Longer Period

Successful tests of messages in smoke frozen on the face of the sky have been made in England and it is believed that they soon will be a familiar feature of daily life. The airplanes producing these messages work at a height of 20,000 feet so that the pilots have to wear electrically heated suits. The intense cold at this altitude partially freezes the smoke as it comes in contact with the air, and this makes the messages legible for a longer period than usual. Also at 20,000 feet atmospheric disturbances are less. Night sky-writing by means of a new searchlight projector throws colored patterns on the clouds.

He claims that he has made the first solo car journey ever attempted over this route.
